Can anyone please point out anything I should be aware of when writing web apps (client-side) in a functional style? A: HTTP itself is a layer which you want to ignore. The problem with the "functional" style is not the http, it's the use of IO. You need to be very careful not to leak "state" between layers. So if you're running SQL code inside a function which is triggered by an event, you need to be very careful to make sure there is no reference back to that sql code. If you're using the web, you need to be very careful of the whole IO thing. You need to be very careful of what a client does with the results you send back. You can't just assume that your http client will send your results back to the server in a certain way. Q: how to extend a page and make navigation and footer? I'm quite new to Craft 3 but I need to create a page which extends another page. The page has to use the same navigation elements and footer than the parent page and I need the navigation to be 82157476af
